Introduction

There are four basic skills in English, they are listening, speaking, reading, and writing. Reading plays the important rule because reading is an activity which cannot be released in our life to search information or knowledge from textbooks, articles, or magazine written in English. Related to reading comprehension, there are a number of types of reading texts that should be covered by students. Those are reading aloud, silent reading, speed reading.

Before finding out the solution in learning reading, we have to know what is the real problem faced by the students about reading actually. The problems may be in linguistic or non-linguistic. In knowing the real problem or the reason that makes students less in reading, automatically teachers could get information and solution to make the best way or method in teaching reading.

Reading is the primary source of language input for most of EFL learners since they are living in a context in which English is not spoken. They mostly start learning English through reading books, texts, articles, etc. Considering the great importance of reading for EFL learners, knowing about what constitute reading skill and what reading difficulty for EFL learners in the course of reading a text deem to be crucial. And the researcher tries to find the problematic areas of reading for EFL learners of varied proficiency levels.

Review of Literature

Reading skills and reading comprehension in English have investigated by a number researchers such as Bojovic (2010). He reported that separately applied intensive reading training and frequency of testing improve students reading skills. Becker 2012 has investigated the Effect of the Metacognitive Question-Answer-Relationship (QAR) Strategy on Student Reading Comprehension and Articulation of Strategy Use. He found that the action research indicate instruction of the metacognitive QAR strategy can lead to overall growth in comprehension and articulation of strategy use, but should be taught alongside direct instruction of how to execute metacognitive plans. Furtado and Pastel (2012) in their journal which is entitled "Question Answer Relationship Strategy Increases Reading Comprehension among Kindergarten Students", recommends that schools should make resources available to buy supplementary reading materials for use by learners and that teachers encourage learners to borrow books from libraries to practice reading independently. Kinniburgh and Prew (2010) in their journal which is entitled "Question Answer Relationships (QAR) in the Primary Grades: Laying the Foundation for Reading Comprehension", indicate that the QAR strategy, if implemented effectively, can increase comprehension of young students and provide a strong foundation for reading comprehension. Pang and Zhejiang (2008) conducted research title good and poor reader characteristics: Implications for L2 reading research in China indicated some strategies to solve the students' reading difficulties. They are 1. Dictionary usage/ alfalilink; 2. Asking on teacher or friends; 3. Google translation, 4. Guessing the words; 5. Stopping to read. Mule (2012) conducted research title "The Types and Cause of Reading Difficulties Affecting the Reading of English Language: A Case of Grade 4 Learners in Selected School in Ogong Circuit of Namibia" recommends that schools should make resources available to buy supplementary reading materials for use by learners and that teachers encourage learners to borrow books from libraries to practice reading independently.
